The Cranberries played at Einstein's in 1993 while I worked there. The band hung out all day, hit the beach, and ended up sunburned. Dolores O'Riordan bought a Metallica/GnR shirt from me in the Theory Shop, and she's wearing it in these photos from the show that night. Before dinner they wanted to clean up, so the band went to my apartment, and Chuck's who was down the hall (the building that was later Freebird Live). I was in the kitchen talking to a friend and his eyes suddenly widened while looking over my shoulder. I turned to see a wet Dolores standing there in a towel. She asked me if I'd put some aloe vera on her back and I obliged. Joel stood there with his mouth hanging open, just watching. Haha. One of the many great things about working shows at Einstein's was the big family style dinners we would have with the band. That night was no exception. It was a great time and they were all wonderful people. Dolores was sweet and kind with a great sense of humor, and wonderful talent. I am sorry to hear that she has passed away at such a young age. I hope she's at peace.
