Hello there,

We are still at home in Limerick, although we are working!!! We did a press conference here the day before yesterday to announce our first Irish concert since 1994. (That will be Millstreet, Co. Cork, Dec 11th) We are really looking forward to it as it is always very special to play in our home country. There are always lots of family and friends so it makes for a very emotional night.

I have some more good news which is that there are some more Cranberry babies on the way!!!! Noel's wife is expecting in February and my wife is expecting a week later. Woo Hoo!!!! It's an experience I can't wait for especially after spending time with Dolores' son.

We travel to Paris on Monday for a few days to do some T.V. shows and then we are off to Milan, Amsterdam, Stockholm, Madrid and various parts of Germany. Doing T.V. shows is a completely different thing from doing a live concert because you are not in control of everything, but that can add to the excitement which is always good thing.

I'll talk to you soon as now I am going to watch Ireland play Australia in the Rugby World Cup..

See ya later,

Fergal.

PRESS RELEASE!

It is over four years since the Cranberries last played in their home country, and with over 150,000 Irish album sales under their belt, the band announced today that they will conclude their European tour in MILL STREET, CO. CORK on 11th (Correction!) December 1999. 22nd October sees the Irish release of "Just My Imagination", the third single taken from the band's current album 'Bury The Hatchet' which has sold in excess of two and a half million copies worldwide, and hit the number one spot in eleven countries.

The video for the new single "Just My Imagination" was directed by American director Phil Harder and shot on location in Ireland, and Irish viewers will be the first in the world to see it.

The band have just returned from a triumphant American tour: "... O'Riordan sang the melancholic 'Dying in the Sun', it was a moment of intense vulnerability that left you pining for more' (Hollywood Reporter on final US date). The European tour will be the biggest tour by a major rock group this fall, dates are selling out all over the continent.

Tickets for the Mill St concert go on sale Saturday 9th October, and are available through all the usual outlets. Tickets are priced at £22.50 (+ subject to the usual booking fee).

Hello there!

We're home, and we had a blast!!! We did our last U.S. concert in San Francisco on the 18th of September, and I'm glad to say, ended on a high; it was brilliant! We then flew to New York to do a T.V. show called "Sessions on 54th St." It was really interesting, there was an audience of about two hundred or so people sitting in a circle and we played in the middle. We did about an hour set with a mixture of old and new songs. Later that night we all went out for a big meal and ended up in the hotel bar singing 'til five in the morning with a Japanese couple who had gotten married that day.

We have a few weeks off now to relax at home and then we are off to various parts of Europe to play on a couple of T.V shows and then we begin the tour of Europe, Yehaaw!! There is an equipment list for our live show on the way in a couple of days, it's just being finished.

The competition for the signed disc is ending on the 30th of September. Winner will be announced mid October. Many thanks for all the entries. (There were LOADS!)

O.K. that's about it,
Talk to you soon,
Fergal.
