Hello again out there!

It's me, Dolores. I'm on a plane on my way back from London. We spent two weeks there mixing the album. It's gonna be called "Wake Up And Smell The Coffee", because that's where I'm at in my life and all of the boys in the band relate to it. It sounds killer, really! There's stuff on there that we could never have done years ago. I guess as you get more wrinkles and grey hair, you also become wiser, more assertive, and more positive!

Anyhow, enough CD talk. We had a super "end of studio" party on Thursday night. We went to a trendy restaurant and had some amazing food, and of course wine. (Sake actually!) There were a lot of sick heads going around the next day, needless to say!

I'm soooo looking forward to getting back to my babies. It's soooo cool! Molly is getting bigger and more beautiful and Taylor really loves her. I'm such a lucky blessed person. I'm so thankful to God for what I have. On my eleven years of touring, I've seen so much deprivation and sadness. Life's so short, it's essential to put love and happiness first. I can't function without love.

I have no whacky stories about mushrooms being launched down my esophagus this time. I've laid off them since that near to death experience!!

Lot's of love and keep smiling!

-Dolores xx

PS. See you soon!
